

Understand leadership, know that you are the one that needs to make decision but it is not a dictatorship. You need to understand who your teammates are individually, know which approach works best for each individual.

2. COMMUNICATION

Communication in any team driven atmosphere is essential. But knowing who you are communicating with, how to communicate with each person on an individual basis and learn the strengths and weaknesses of your communication styles will ultimately mold you into a better overall leader.

TEAM CHEMISTRY

Understanding Leadership

To get the respect as a leader, you need to be confident making decisions with everyone's best interest in mind.

Understanding Teammates

It's a two way street: You need to understand who your teammates are individually, know which approach works best for each individual. It's up to you to micromanage that, and use everyone's opinion to formulate your decision.

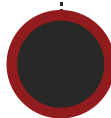

Example: if your teammates are not agreeing with a call you made, chances are, there is something that you overlooked. If you think otherwise, you have to take the leadership and explain why you are making this decision against the rest of the team.

COMMUNICATION WITH ORGANIZATIONS

Talking to an organization is tricky, you have to approach them with the mindset that you want the best for them and your team, even having to bite your tongue on occasion.

You have to make sure you don't say the wrong things, you should always be grateful and respectful for what they do. You shine by your in-game performance.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

TEAM CHEMISTRY

ORGS AND FANS

TAKE SOME NOTES

